NATIONAL PARKS

Britain's breathing spaces

How many of the UK National Park family are you planning to visit?

Here's the challenge:

There are 15 members of the National Parks' family to visit and 'collect' from Devon to the Scottish Highlands. For each National Park you visit, you can have your Visitor Passport specially stamped with the logo from that National Park. How many stamps do you think you could collect this year?

We would love to hear all about your adventures visiting National Parks. You can share these on www.nationalparks.gov.uk/passport. Please also send us some pictures or a video of you enjoying your visit.

For further details about where to get your passport stamps and visitor centre opening hours, please go to www.nationalparks.gov.uk/passport

Before beginning your journey to collect your Visitor Passport stamp:

* Please check the opening times of the visitor centre you are planning to go to as opening hours vary between National Parks. You can find these by contacting the centre or by visiting www.nationalparks.gov.uk/passport

* In addition to the stamp with the visitor centre signing, why not have someone take a photo of you outside that visitor centre and collect photos as well as stamps?

Some great ways to get into the outdoors

There are so many great ways to get outdoors and enjoy your own breathing space in National Parks. From gentle woodland walks with children, to scrambling and climbing in spectacular mountains, you can get your boots on and get outdoors.

Get on a bike, a boat, a horse, even a hot air balloon and take yourself further to get a different view.

Or take some time to feel closer to the wildlife of our National Parks, with perfect places for wildlife-watching.

Our guide to accessible activities will give you great ideas about where to go if you need access for people with wheelchairs, pushchairs, limited mobility, or simply for those whose legs aren't as young as they used to be.
